SATURDAY EVENING, MAY 25.

From the WESTERN TELEGRAPHE.

THE Scots Iriſhman has changed his game—The abandoned Jacobins, who have ſhook hands with ſhame, and ſaid unto "evil be thou our good," he leaves to the vengeance of their injured country.--He thinks it in vain to probe a rotten limb, for which the amputating knife is the only remedy. That part of the community which he now addreſſes, although it exhibits more floridity, and appearance of health, yet it is far very far, from being ſound—Doubt, doubt, eternal doubt, affects the nerves with a paralytic numbneſs; and an unconquerable reluctance to declare againſt dangerous principles corrupts the humors—Principles, on which the bloody hand of experience has wrote "FALSE," in ſuch large characters as muſt ſtrike the eye of the moſt heedleſs obſerver—There indeed, ſeems to be ſo great a tendency to putrefaction, that he has little hope of the application of his Scots pills being able to prevent it.

One ſervice, however, the Scots Iriſhman will render the Small Federaliſts: He will reſcue them from oblivion—The ſhades of diſtinction between a Jacobin and a Small Federaliſt are ſo fine, that a future Hiſtorian would be very apt to claſs them together, and deſcribe them under the general name of Jacobins. But the poems of the Scots Iriſhman will be an authentic record, that ſuch a diſtinct ſpecies exiſted. In the latter end of the nineteenth century, the hiſtorian of the United States, recording the tranſactions of the preſent time, after delineating the character of Jacobiniſm, and mournfully dwelling on its deſtructive progreſs, may write thus:—"It ſeems a ramification of the ſame ſect exiſted, at the ſame time, in the United States, who pretended to reſpect the government, and gave a faint approbation to the meaſures which it had adopted to defend itſelf and the country from the dreadful effect which we have deſcribed, but who ſtill approved and maintained the principles from which theſe effects proceeded. They were called in the cant of the times, ſmall Federaliſts. But as no mention is made of them by any writer of theſe times, that has come down to us, except by an obſcure poet, who wrote in an old language hardly now intelligible, it is probable they degenerated into mere Jacobins, and were loſt in the original Genus."

NOTES.

* Their attachment to Jacobin principles, by which are meant the doctrines of equality, ſovereignty of the people, and right of reſiſtance, which, unleſs exploded from all free, and legitimate governments, no regular ſyſtem of civil liberty can have long duration.—Order and the abſolute reign of the laws, which are the very ſoul of Republics, can never be eſtabliſhed. Chaos muſt forever overſpread the political world, and mankind will finally revert to that ſtate of ſavage independence, and ſelf-government, which we ſee our Indian neighbours ſo happily enjoy, and which ſome humane modern philoſophers have preferred to the bleſſings of civilized ſociety.

JOEL BARLOW.

One of the prettieſt traits in a Jacobin's character is inconſiſtency; the faculty of changing ſides and principles at pleaſure.—The following paragraphs, reſpecting Mr. John Adams, now Preſident, are taken from Joel Barlow's Oration in July 1787 "Adams to his immortal honor, and timely aſſiſtance of his country, has ſet the great example. His treatiſe, in defenſe of the conſtitution, tho confined to ſtate republics, is calculated to do infinite ſervice, by correcting thouſands of erroneous ſentiments ariſing from our inexperience—ſentiments which, if uncorrected in this early ſtage of our political exiſtence, will be the ſource of calamities without meaſure and without end: Should that venerable philoſopher and ſtateſman be induced to continue his enquiries, by tracing the hiſtory of confederacies, and with his uſual energy and perſpicuity delineate and defend a ſyſtem adapted to the circumſtances of the United States—I will not ſay he could deſerve more from his diſtreſt country, but he would crown a life of patriotic labors, and render an eſſential additional ſervice to the world." So much for Borlow in 1787.

Now ſee Barlow illuminated, in 1798. In his letter to his brother Baldwin, which Lyon ſo kindly publiſhed, ſpeaking of Preſident Adam's Speech at the openion of Congreſs, he ſays, "We wondered that the anſwer of both houſes had not been, an order to ſend him to a mad-houſe!" John Adams in 1787 was a "Venerable Philoſopher and Stateſman"—in 1798 he deſerves a mad-houſe! Look ye jacobins; where is the change; in John Adams or Joel Barlow? To ſhow an athieſt and jacobin, in his true character, let him ſee what he ſaid and wrote one yeanago!

From the Salem (Maſs.) Gazette

The French Directorial Agent of Guadaloupe, Desfourneaux, has at length thrown off the maſk of pretended friendſhip, and proclaimed hoſtilities with our country. That he had Directorial inſtructions, to ſanction the meaſure, no one can doubt. The brave Truxton, by capturing the free-booting Inſurgent, rouſed the paſſions of the hypocrite, ond drew him from the cool wiles of deceit to DECLARE WAR. When a country aſſumes war, as means of defence—when government, property, morals and religion are threatened—when all the ſocial ties that make life dear to us are dependants—ſhe then graſps the ſword of juſtice, as much as when the laws of the country employs coerſion to curb robbers and thieves; it then becomes good men to throw away the olive branch, and form themſelves into phalanxes of determined foes, to oppoſe unprincipled enemies.

While peace is talked of, and there are no appearances of its being realized, it has ſtill a tendency to ſeduce the ſimple, and to make them coaleſce with the jacobins in their clamors againſt government. The partiſans of France watch every criſis of public affairs with reſerved anxiety, while their fertile imaginations diſtribute inſinuations, lies and reproches, to help a ſucceſsful termination in their favour. Even Desfourneaux, in his War Proclamation, is not unmindful of their intrigues, ſo congenial to the French character: he pretends to reſpect negociations that may have begun. But here we may ſee by glancing our eyes over the proclamation, that he has variety of views to gratify; one of which is, by making to appear that the Directory are yet pacific, he ſtill promiſes himſelf to give activity to the machinations of the jacobins in this country; another, by having the public plunder depoſited in the national coffers of which he is the maſter, he deſigns to enrich himſelf with American ſpoils, as his predeceſſor our good friend Victor Hugues did. But, while morals and honeſty have retreated from the French, and degraded them into a nation of freebooters, we hope the Americans will not weigh their happineſs by money ſcales, and degrade themſelves into a nation of miſers.

NEW-YORK, May 22.

Mr. DANIEL N. TRAIN, a young gentleman of genius and abilities, late a pupil ofRuſh, the famous Carver, of Philadelphia ſome time ſince arrived in this city, has lately completed the ornaments of the ſhip Adams, ſoon to be launched at the Walaboght, Long Iſland——The following is a ſketch of theſe ornaments:

On the head of the ſhip is figure of the the Preſident, repreſented in the attitude of addreſſing both Houſes of Congreſs. In his left had is a ſcroll, ſuppoſed to be his addreſs—his right is raiſed in a ſpirited poſition, as if in the act of bidding defiance to the enemies of America—At his ſide is a branch of oak, ſpringing from a rock, emblematic of his firmneſs and patriotic virtues in ſupport of the rights of his country.

On the ſtern, in the center of the Taffrail, are the Arms of the United States, ſupported by Sybele and Neptune—the latter with his left hand reſting on his Trident, and his right extended over our "INFANT NAVY," with ſome attributes of Commerce—The former reclining on a ſheaf of Wheat, with a Scepter in her right hand—in the left is the Key of the Earth, and ſupporting a Cornucopica—At her ſide is a Youth with the Emblems of Agriculture, offering its productions for the ſupport of the United States.

The ornamental part of this veſſel exhibits a ſtriking proof of Mr. TRAIN'S abilities. We wiſh him equal ſucceſs in the Carvings for the 44, now building at Corlæ's Hook, which, we are told, he is engaged to execute.

ALBANY, May 15.

On Saturday laſt arrived in this city, from Windſor, in Vermont, a party of 120 artilleriſts, under the command of Lieuteuants Leonard and Yates, of the United States artillery. They are all young good looking men; and, we underſtand, have been chiefly enliſted at Windſor and its vicinity. On Tueſday they went on ſhip board, and on Wedneſday ſailed for Fort Jay, in the harbor of New-York.

Hon. John Myer, Eſq. Meſſrs. Thomas Manly and John Mills, are choſen members of Aſſembly for Herkemer county—they are federaliſts.

Charles Teed, Nathan Rockwell, Geo. Comb, Abel Smith, and Abijah Gilpert, are elected members of Aſſembly for the county of Weſtcheſter—the three firſt are federaliſt.

John R. Syers, Eſq. is elected member of Aſſembly for Richmond county—a federaliſt.

No doubt is entertained but there will be a majority of ten or twelve decided friends of government in the Houſe of Aſſembly, at the next meeting of the Legiſlature of this ſtate. This is tolerable well, conſidering what ſort of a group we had the laſt winter.

LANSINGBURGH, May 14.

From the reſult of the election in different parts of the ſtate, we are led to beleive that Federaliſm will again have an aſcendancy in our Houſe of Aſſembly. The counties of Columbia and New-York have entirely changed their repeſentatives. From this circumſtance it is preſumed, that Virgiana reſolutions will not in future receive the unmerited attention they were indulged with the laſt ſeſſion, and the Maſſachuſetts amendments to the conſtitution of the United Sates will find advocates ſufficient for their adoption in the Legiſlature at New-York.

HARRISBURGH, May 15.

An accident took place yeſterday morning in this town, which ought to ſerve as a ſerious warning to all dealers in Gunpowder: As two men were purchaſing the above article at the ſtore of Mr. Henry Fulton, one of them with a view of trying its ſtrength, by flaſhing a little in the pan of his gun, communicated a ſpark to about 5 pounds which Mr Fulton was in the act of weighing. The ſtore-houſe being a good deal confined, conſiderable damage was done to the goods by the exploſion, and the whole dwelling houſe wreck'd in a ſurprizing manner. It is an extraordinary circumſtance, however, and it is with much pleaſure we obſerve, that no one was dangerouſly wounded. Mr. Fulton, altho' within one foot of the powder, was not ſo much wounded as the two men, who were ſome yards diſtant.

BOSTON, May 21.

THE FOREIGN ARTICLES,

This day presented, though few in number, are later in date, than those published in our last Mercury. On Saturday the Ranger arrived from Liverpool; and is the latest vessel from England by three or four days. It was rumored on Saturday and Sunday, with great confidence, that the papers brought by this vessel contained a contradiction of the news we had the pleasure first to announce, of a partial defeat experienced by the French in an engagement with the Austrians. Instead of being contradicted it seems confirmed. The rumor was predicated on a letter from Massena; which is merely the official account of French success on the first moment of recommencing hostilities, the private account of which was published in our paper of May 3, and has never been contested. The private statement, however, made that event of more importance, than it proves to be by the official. That stated 4500 Austrians to have been made prisoners. This, 3500. This Gallic outrage was the first notice the Austrians had of the re-commencement of war. For be it known, that Gen. Massena, without special provocation, attacked the Austrians at Chur, on the 6th of March—and that the French Directory did not ask for a declaration of war, of the branch of the French Government, in which the Constitution has vested the right to make such declaration, until the thirteenth day of March. And yet they try to out-face the world, and denominate the Austrians the Aggressors. Massena's violence being the first notice of the new war—it is not extraordinary that the unsuspecting troops of the Emperor, in the primary conflict should meet with disaster. But it is very probable they would seize the first moment of retaliation. We have no accounts of French success after this affair, and if the news of their misfortune is not true, many days must have been passed in inactivity—which, considering the crisis, and the vicinity of the belligerent armies, is highly improbable. It is, therefore, we think, a just deduction from all circumstances, that the French have been defeated. Indeed we may conclude from the very latest news, that defeat has not been confined to Massena's corps, but has been experienced by the grand army under Jourdan. The ambition, avarice, insolence and tyranny of the French, has roused the indignation of the world—has strung the arms of her foes to mighty deeds; and neither her diplomatic skill, nor infuriate myrmidons can save her from merited flagellation.

IRELAND.

Still continues convulsed. But the strong arm of England grapples her, and prevents her doing much harm to herself, or her protectors; and preserves her from being poisoned by the nostrums of French Quaks. Notwithstanding the disturbed situation of Ireland, the Parliament, at the end of March, directed a book to be opened for the Loan of 4,000,000, which there is no doubt will be raised.

The DUTCH FLEET.

Notwithstanding what has been asserted of their having put to sea; were positively laying snug in the Texel on the 24th of March. They were in readiness; and consisted of 6 ships of the line, many frigates and transports.

FRENCH PRIVATEERS.

Among other measures of the French Minister of Marine, for equipping a large fleet at Brest, he has again reforted to that horrid expedient which has been so often and so bitterly condemned in the English, that of impressing seamen. In the progress of this measure many French Privateers have been unmanned, or undevilled, and are, from that cause alone, we believe, laid up. We have no reason to think privateering abolished in France.

His Excellency Gov. SUMNER.

It is with most painful emotions we inform our readers, that at a consultation of respectable Physicians—they concided in opinion, that no hopes remained of the recovery of our universally-esteemed Chief Magistrate from the Disease with which he is afflicted. In conveying this information, we wish to prepare the public mind for a very distressing event, which we have too much reason to suppose we shall shortly have to announce.

THE LAUNCH.

Yesterday the frigate BOSTON, pierced for 32 guns was launched from the Continental Ship Yard, at the North End. Every thing was in excellent preparation, and at half past eleven, the spur shores and block being removed, she glided regularly and safely to the element, in which we hope she will be conspicuously honorable to our Country. Her appearance on the water was beautiful and majestic, and commanded the admiration of the best judges. The exhilirating scene, was honored with the presence of the President of the United States, Lieut. Governor Gill, the most respectable Citizens, and a general collection of people perhaps as numerous as ever attended on the like occasion. Capt. Gardner's Company of Artillery, were paraded by that active and spirited officer, marched to the wharf of Jeffrey and Russell, and announced the moment of the launch by suitable discharges from their field pieces. Salutes were also fired from several armed vessels in the harbor; and the American Flag was exultingly hoisted on every mast. The Frigate BOSTON, has been built by the merchants of the town, to be loaned to government; and very extraordinary dispatch has been made in completing her. Mr. Hart was the Master Builder. The Frigate immediately after she was afloat was warped to Hancock's wharf—and will unquestionably, very soon be ready for active service.

We venture to assert, that this is the first Copper-bottomed ship built in America, whose bolts and spikes, (drawn from Malleable Copper) have been manufactured in the United States. We think the public are under obligation to Paul Revere, Esq. for his indefatigable attention to this Branch of Naval Architecture especially at the time when the British Government has prohibited the exportation of that valuable Article.

NEW-YORK, May 24.

Captain Taber, of the brig Lucretia, arrived at New Bedford from the Havannah, spoke on his passage a vessel from New York for the Havannah, from which he was informed, that they had been boarded by a French privateer off the Capes of Virginia, but being in ballast was suffered to proceed; and that he was further informed, there were 3 French privateers, a brig and two schrs, of 12 guns each, cruising between the Capes of Virginia and Sandy Hook.

LONDON, March 28.

A Greek vessel, containing three Frenchmen in disguise, and amongst them a Secretary of Buonaparte's, was captured by a Turkish ship, and the prisoners sent to Constantinople. There was found upon them, in sequins and piastres, about a million and a half livres tournois.

At Smyrna, the French are hunted like wild beasts. Several chained together, had perished in the dungeons, but through the efforts of the English Consul and the merchants, enraged at these cruelties, others were set at liberty, and landed in Italy.

March 27.

When the King of Sardinia visited the Pope, he addressed him in these words—"I cease to lament my misfortunes since they procure me the consolation of kissing your Holiness's feet!"

The death of Major L. ought to be an example to all young men. Heir to a Baronetcy and to an estate of 9000 pounds a year, blest with the affections of a beautiful woman to whom he was about to be married, but devoted to the Gaming Table, he had involved himself considerably in debt. His father Sir William, paid all his engagements on a promise of honor that he would play no more; and it is said that Miss K——, to whom he was attached, further strengthened what is called i play the tying him up, by declaring that their union depended on his weaning himself from the vice. In an evil hour he returned to the gaming table—lost a large sum—and the next morning, stung by reflection on the forfeiture of his promise, shot himself through the head.

We are informed that at this time there are actually cruising in the West Indies, 12 vessels of war, belonging to the United States. The apprehensions that have been entertained, that the commerce of this country in those seas was left in an unprotected state, by the return of so many of the armed vessels, must subside, particularly as several of them are on the point of returning to that station.
